Facilitation is an ART – not to be confused with training, management or leadership. While a leader's role is to manage, organize and lead a team or an organization toward an established goal, the facilitator's role is to serve as a catalyst - assuring that the process is smooth, the goal is attainable and the best thinking of each member of the group is considered.

Craig Rider, widely known for his ability to develop dynamic teams and effective team processes, is now offering a program that will enable you to significantly enhance your facilitation skills – whether you are operating within an organization or as an outside trainer. In one energizing day of interactive programming you will learn how to dynamically facilitate a variety of group processes including:

- Team building
- Partnering
- Strategic planning
- Focus groups
- Brainstorming
- Consensus building

Craig is expert at developing an atmosphere that encourages creativity, imagination and resourcefulness while engaging everyone in the process – the true essence of facilitation.

He has developed and delivered a wide variety of dynamic programs and processes for more than 25 years. These are a few comments from individuals who have participated in programs and processes facilitated by Craig.

“Fantastic techniques – the best event like this I have ever attended.”

“Dynamic facilitator!”

“I really enjoyed this.”

“I have new thoughts about how to optimize the strengths of my team members.”

“Excellent facilitator – knows when to step in and when to let things run their course.”

You too can get these outstanding results and positive comments after participating in this action-filled, informative and energizing workshop.
