What would you do with an extra $300?

Pat and Craig Rider used it to make a dream come true. During their weeklong honeymoon on a sail boat they discussed starting a business. Within a year they had established a consulting company with the $300 Craig earned teaching an extra college course. The Riders' personal and professional journey now spans almost three decades.

300 Bucks and a Dream provides an intimate picture of how two individuals with contrasting talents and approaches forged a life and a business together. They share the fun and frustrations of working with individuals, corporate executives, business teams - and each other.

Their stories and insights are told in the first person narrative and run the gamut of emotions from humorous to harrowing to heartwarming. Join Pat and Craig as they discuss changes they've experienced, share ways they took advantage of those changes, and provide practical guidance on starting and sustaining a business.
